Chanel No.5 is considered a revolutionary perfume as it was the first ever to use aldehydes, a now common practice. The atomiser represents the inventive nature of this perfume, and the martini glass the fashionable and steely nature of Coco Chanel herself. Apprécier

Portrait of a Lady was inspired by Henry James' novel called 1881 about a woman overwhelmed by her destiny after inheriting large amounts of money. On this platter you'll notice a gold champagne flute representative of her inheritance and an easel void of a portrait. Please raise a toast to destiny, and allow me to capture this moment in a simple stroke.
